

Dino Iasella: Guitar Teacher

Some of you already know Dino as Eastminster's AV specialist. Music has been part of his life from an early age, growing up in a family that played folk music together. He found the guitar in his early teen years, and after spending his later teens playing in bands, he chose to pursue music academically. He decided to study jazz guitar at Duquesne's Mary Pappert School of Music. Along with his technical instruction, Dino brings experience as a recording session player and several years of private lesson instruction.
